

VOICES FROM THE FRONT

The nursing crisis in Ontario is real, and it's having a direct and profound effect on the quality of patient care.

Nurses across this province are struggling in a critically understaffed and underfunded health-care system. As the union representing 68,000 nurses and health-care professionals across Ontario, we asked for personal stories from the front line. Their responses are urgent and heartfelt. They tell it like it is.
